Grants Available for High School Teachers

By now you're probably getting close to the end of your semester and the time to start thinking about final grades and how you'll demonstrate your support to your students. There are still a few opportunities for you to earn some extra revenue for your classroom and really make a difference for your students. If you're interested in applying for a grant to support your classroom, click here.

The survey is a great tool to encourage school districts, media representatives, parents and educators to send their children to special education programs. The 2011 survey brings attention to the critical importance of economic education in our nation's schools. The survey suggests the movement between 2009 and 2011 showed little-

CEE Wins EIFLE Award

Congratulations to Diann Dood of Catoosa High School in Catoosa, OK. She won 2 registration tickets to the 51st Annual Financial Literacy and Economic Education Conference! Congratulations to our Gen i Revolution Challenge Grant Winner! The award is an excellent opportunity to partner with CEE's professional workshops, curriculum development, materials and national conferences. You've experienced firsthand the programs offered by the Council for Economic Education—professional workshops, curriculum development, materials and national conferences.
